The Priority Verdict for Al-Radhy Al-Astirabathee in His Explanations of Abin Al-Hajib's Kaffiat and Shaffiat

Abstract:

The Arabic grammar acquires its knowledge originality from the serious attempts to classify the language according to a standard method that makes it nearer to the fields of science which are governed by regulations and proofs. Theorizing the regulations and proofs of the language, though it came late from the era of writing, but it was present in the minds of the grammarians when they put bases for the language. Without this presence, they would be unable to provide such explanation of language accompanied by the analysis that enable them to classify the language into levels.

The priority verdict was one of the knowledge guides that many grammar rules were built on. The researcher choose this topic for its problematic arguments that is related to the conception. Al-Anbari regarded it as one of the verifications that are related to the measurement whereas Al-Siouty see it as one of the measurement divisions. This guide is a problematic in its own, in its use, and in its position from the other grammatical guides. What urge the researcher to go further is to find out its reality and to illuminate all the problems. By reading this guide, it became clear that the grammarians have employed it in the language levels. Therefore, studying this guide in the light of these levels becomes a necessity to enfold it.
